Calendula officinalis something no first aid kit or medicine cabinet should be without! Ideal for cuts, wounds, scrapes it heals skin fast. Our is wild crafted from the mountains and is well more potent than any I've encountered in 35 years. There is so much it does here's a list of several. Taken internally Calendula tincture and tea are used in the treatment of digestive inflammation and gastric or duodenal ulcers promotes discharge of bile from the gall-bladder that aids in the relief of gall-bladder problem, just place 1-2 droppers full in your favorite tea. Calendula extract and tea is used to detoxify the body, induces urination, strengthens the immune system. Calendula has anti-fungal action and is used for athlete's foot, helps relieve menstrual pains, promotes normal menstruation cycle and treats menopausal symptoms.

Calendula has antibacterial and antiviral actions, used for treating wounds and sores, contains calendulozide B that has sedative and anti-ulcer activity. Calendula helps stimulate the production of collagen and wound healing, ideal for first aid treatment of minor burns and scalds. Calendula is used to treat scorpion, spider and bee stings. Calendula oil is used to treat ear infection and pain.

We use it in our Angel Care diaper rash cream. As a gargle Calendula relieves sore throats and inflammations in the mouth. It stimulates blood circulation and promotes sweating. We also use it in our Varicose Veins Lotion.

Ideal for external bleeding, reduces capillary engorgement and hepatic congestion and recommended in the treatment of fever and flu. Calendula tea is also used as eye wash for eye sores, but not the tincture! Calendula is also believe to help fight and treat cancer. Quite a bit for a little yellow gold flower!
